United Nations Development Fund for Women

Time for Action: CEDAW Implementation in Southeast Asia presents the various ways in which both governments and civil society actors have used the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) to make the promise of non-discrimination and equality one step closer to reality for women. The book is born out of UNIFEM's concentrated efforts in raising awareness about the Convention and women's right among both duty bearers and rights holders in seven countries in Southeast Asia – Cambodia, Indonesia, Lao PDR, the Philippines, Thailand, Timor-Leste, Vietnam. It shows how CEDAW has been used in advocacy for stronger legal frameworks that prohibit discrimination against women and advance women's human rights, in sensitizing the justice system to protect the rights of women, in guiding local development and budget allocation processes. It demonstrates the innovative ways in which civil society organizations are popularizing CEDAW, reaching out to excluded groups of women, and using it as a means to hold their government accountable.
